

WAC 478-121-325 Brief adjudicative proceedings—Grounds for administrative review. A party may request administrative review for any or all of the following reasons:

(1) To determine whether there was a material error that substantially affected the outcome of the fact finding or sanctioning;

(2) To consider newly discovered evidence, not reasonably available during the fact finding, that could substantially impact the outcome;

(3) To determine whether the sanction(s) imposed were appropriate for the violation committed and were not excessively lenient or excessively severe; or

(4) To determine whether the issue and interests involved warrant a full hearing.
