

WAC 182-565-0400 General. (1) Washington state has nine accountable communities of health (ACHs), as defined in RCW 82.04.43395, each of which operates a regional community care hub. In addition, the federally recognized tribes in Washington operate a statewide native hub to support the delivery of whole-person care coordination.

(2) An eligible person may access any community care hub in the state of Washington. The community care hubs also work closely with managed care organizations, providers, and community partners to identify and engage apple health clients who are likely to have multiple health and social needs.

(3) Community care hubs provide case management, outreach, and education services to qualifying Washington apple health clients across Washington state.

(4) Subject to available funds, allowable expenditures are covered up to the medicaid agency's financial limit, as determined by the agency.

(5) This subchapter applies to the portion of health-related social needs (HRSN) services the agency administers through community care hubs.
